Norway Christmas traditions

In Norway we celebrate our Christmas with family and friends.

Its a tradition to chop or buy a spruce that we set in our living room and decorate.

Christmas is all about to give people presents, so you get a lot as well.

Father Christmas is a popular tradition, were Santa (often a neighbor or a relative dressed out in a white beard and red clothes) Knocks on someones doors giving the children presents. Where we put under the tree

We set up socks the night before Christmas, and on the night someone (Santa) fill them up with candies.

We also have our Christmas calenders, gift calenders, quiz calenders and the most famous one the chocolate calender

We have four Christmas candles witch we light up one at each Sunday in December.

❄️ The Christmas food ❄️

- On Christmas eve we have special dishes, for example, Christmas rib, red cabbage, Salted and dried meat from mutton, Christmas sausage, turkey and rutabaga

❄️ Christmas Cookies ❄️

- We in Norway love to eat traditional cookies around X-Mas
- We have this rare tradition about making seven different sorts of cookies for Christmas
- Many families have this come-a-longs were the family bake together (Mine too)
- Traditional biscuits: Brown sticks, donuts, checkerboard, chocolate cookies, gingerbread houses, dough-men, wreath cakes (there is plenty more)

X-mas at home

- Well around Christmas my family use to have these come-a longs were we bake cookies, its really cozy and fun.
- My family and I have two calendars, one chocolate and one present calender.
- At Christmas eve we use to see this movie, Three hazelnuts to Cinderella at Czech, its dubbed/text at Norwegian, so I get what they are saying. And no I cant speak Czech...
- We hang up Christmas stocking over the bed before Christmas eve, and on Christmas eve they are filled up with candy. Thanks mum and dad...Ups I mean Santa..
- On Cristmas eve we celebrate with my family, often at my house.
- My dad, my brother and me make gingerbread houses till Christmas from scratch
- My family have ALOT of christmas decorations and we decorate always at the 1th of december

Here is some pictures from Christmas

(I didn't have time to upload pictures from home, sorry! I took some from the Internet instead, hope that's okay? Okay.)

Almost all christmas I had there's been snow

We decorate outdoors as well

Christmas streets

 Thats about it, have a lovely X-mas!
